The image displays a 3x3 grid of screenshots illustrating the iterative design process of a restaurant POS interface. Each row represents a different stage of the design, and each column represents a different aspect of the interface.

- Top Row: Shows the initial design with a top navigation bar. The first screenshot (top-left) shows the initial design with a top navigation bar. The second screenshot (top-middle) shows the design after removing the top navigation bar. The third screenshot (top-right) shows the design after removing the top navigation bar and adding a bottom navigation bar.
- Bottom Row: Shows the design after removing the top navigation bar and adding a bottom navigation bar. The first screenshot (bottom-left) shows the design after removing the top navigation bar and adding a bottom navigation bar. The second screenshot (bottom-middle) shows the design after removing the top navigation bar and adding a bottom navigation bar. The third screenshot (bottom-right) shows the design after removing the top navigation bar and adding a bottom navigation bar.
